Gale Damages 3 Planes At Airport

HOMES HIT AS 60-MILE WIND BUFFETS CITY

Aircraft Torn Loose From Moorings, One Carried 100 Feet Into Air.

ALL OF STATE SUFFERS

Windows Broken, Trees Blown Over By Gale Followed By Mercury Drop.

A gale that reached a velocity of 60 miles an hour at intervals last night blew winter back into the Mansfield area and caused widespread property damage throughout Ohio.

Damage in Richland county was centered at the Mansfield airport north of the city where three planes were torn loose from their moorings. Damage to the planes was placed at $500 by J. R. Harrington, airport manager.

One light machine was carried 100 feet in the air by a twisting gale which struck the airport about 12:30 a. m. today. The plane then crashed. Damage to two other metal ships was less serious. The loss was partly covered by insurance.

Civilian pilot training students sleeping in the barracks at the airport heard the crash and ran out in time to save the two metal planes from hurtling

Wind Moves Hands of Courthouse Clock

County workers thought for a while this morning that they were an hour late on the job until they learned that it was the big clock on top of the courthouse that was off schedule. The windstorm last night moved the hour hand on the clock ahead, making the clock appear an hour faster. Tony Moritz, courthouse custodian, soon straightened out the time and at the same time repaired an attic window in the courthouse that was blown out by the storm.

Hart, Whom Japs Reported 'Killed', Returns To U. S.

NEW YORK —(INS)— The man who was "killed" last month by Japanese propaganda reports and the ambassador to the court of St. James were safe home today after a Transatlantic flight by clipper.

Well-tanned by the tropical sun, Admiral Thomas C. Hart, commander of the United States Asiatic fleet and until recently commander of the combined naval forces of the United Nations in the south Pacific, appeared optimistic over the Far Eastern situation despite continual Allied reverses.

The 61-year-old admiral, who was reported killed Feb. 4 aboard the cruiser Houston by a Japanese radio broadcast, wisely summed up the situation with an eleven-word sentence—"When you lose a campaign you don't necessarily lose a war."

John G. Winant, the ambassador, asserted that the loss of Singapore and other reverses in the Far East has served only to stiffen "the determination of the British people to fight."

Capital Girds For Battle on Farm Parity

FDR Expected to Attack Proposal In Radio Address Tonight.

(By International News Service)

WASHINGTON — With President Roosevelt expected to carry the fight directly to the farmers in a radio broadcast tonight, the house today headed for one of the most bitter battles since war brought "unity" to Capitol Hill—on the question of parity prices for agricultural crops.

Opposed to the proposal, the president will make his address to the annual community farm dinners being held tonight in observation of the anniversary of the New Deal's farm program.

Parity, long the goal of congressional farm leaders, is the calculated price for farm products which would raise the income of farmers to levels comparable with those received by industrial workers.

Battle lines on the issue, publicly opposed by President Roosevelt as "inflationary," were forming all last week as the house considered the $700,000,000 agriculture department appropriation bill for 1943. The measure, containing parity provisions, has brought newly consolidated economy forces into play against a powerful farm bloc that has had its will in congress for a decade.

At some points in the debate, the economy forces have decisively over-ridden the farm faction, and the bill has been cut by $2,300,000 from the total as it was reported out of the appropriations committee. The farm bloc succeeded in writing only one increase into the bill—a $208,000 addition to funds allotted to the tobacco inspection and grading service.

Compromise on the parity issue apparently was killed at the White House Saturday, when congressional leaders conferred for more than an hour with President Roosevelt on "general aspects" of Lake Erie Ore Fleet Ready For Shipping Season.

CLEVELAND —(INS)— Waiting only for ice to melt, the huge fleet of ore carriers on the Great Lakes is prepared to handle another record breaking tonnage load as five new ships go into lake service this season, ore carriers announced today.

A small shipping lane was opened from Sandusky Bay to within a half mile of Kelley's Island when the motorship Mascot broke harbor ice. Coast guard officials stated, however, that most of Lake Erie is ice-locked and cutters will begin to open lanes near the end of the month.

Last year the shipping season started shortly after April 1 and coast guardsmen at the Cleveland district indicate that the new season will begin about the same time.

Suave, Educated, Rich Man's Son Now the Champion of 'Poor India'

Nehru Holds Answer to Question United Nations Ask.

Britain needs desperately the help of India's 353 million people, both at the front and in war industries. India is willing to help but only in return for her independence. Pandit Jawaharlal Nehru has supplanted Mohandas K. Gandhi as leader of the Indian independence movement and the British Empire is now negotiating with him, the current No. 1 man of the Orient.

(By Wide World)

PANDIT JAWAHARLAL NEHRU, leader of India's movement for independence, in many ways may be considered a parallel to the United States' Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Roosevelt comes of wealthy, capitalistic stock; Nehru's father, Motil, is one of India's greatest lawyers and richest men.

Roosevelt went to Groton and Harvard; Nehru attended Harrow school in England and won his degree with honors at old Trinity college, Cambridge. Both are lawyers. Neither works at his profession right now.

Both might be expected to favor strong capitalist systems of government and unregimented business. Neither does.

Nehru's political philosophy is far to the left of Roosevelt's.

BURNS FATAL TO MOTHER OF FIVE

Mrs. Goldie Burkhart, 34, Dies After Kerosene Sprinkled Clothing Ignites.

Mrs. Goldie Marie Burkhart, 34-year-old mother of five children, died yesterday in Mansfield General hospital of burns suffered in her home near Loudonville Saturday when kerosene accidentally spilled on her clothing became ignited.

She was burned despite heroic efforts of 11-year-old Merle, her oldest child. He threw a blanket around his mother to smother the flames and then summoned help.

Mrs. Burkhart was filling kerosene lamps when the oil spilled over her dress and the floor. Authorities said she used newspapers to mop up the kerosene and then put them in the stove. They apparently exploded and ignited her clothing. The flames covered most of her body before her son could smother them.

Surviving are her husband, Austin, an Erie railroad employe, five children, Merle, William, Glenn, George and Edna. Also surviving are her mother, Mrs. Edna Hochstetler of Orrville, and six brothers, Myron and Donald Hochstetler of West Salem, Walter and Junior of Orrville, Vernon of Polk, and Homer of Ashland.

Brief funeral services will be held at 1 p. m. Wednesday at the Swank funeral home, Loudonville, followed by regular services at 2:30 in the Maple Grove church north of Ashland. Rev. George Strasbaugh of Kent will officiate and burial will be in Orange cemetery near Nankin.

FREIGHTER SUNK

Third Brazilian Ship Sent To Bottom Off Virginia Coast.

RIO DE JANEIRO—(AP)—The 7,878-ton Brazilian freighter Arabutan was sunk Saturday night 70 miles off Newport News, Virginia, but all aboard were saved. Permission to publish the news was given today.

The Arabutan, the third Brazilian vessel sunk off the east coast of the United States, was operated by the Lloyd Nacional line.

Besides her 51 crew members it was reported here that she also had aboard some members of a Brazilian tanker which is being repaired in the United States.

The Arabutan, formerly the Italian ship Caprera, was built at San Francisco, Calif., in 1917.

DRAFT SHUFFLE STARTS TODAY

Boards Get Ready to Assign Serial Numbers to County's 5,000 Registrants.

Members of Mansfield's three draft boards were shuffling the cards today, as the first step in assigning serial numbers to the 5,000 residents of the county between the ages of 20 and 45 who signed up three weeks ago.

Selective service regulations provide that local draft boards on March 9 shall "thoroughly shuffle and mix the green registration cards and place on each a serial number starting with T-1, T-2, and so on through the entire list.

Numbers assigned to the registrants will be sent to national draft headquarters where they will be prepared for the third national draft lottery on March 17. On that date, the numbers will be placed in capsules, shuffled in a goldfish bowl, and drawn by goevrnment officials.

The order in which the serial numbers are drawn will determine the order in which new registrants will be called into the army.

While there has been no definite word on when the 20-45 group will be summoned for army service, it was stated at Columbus that Ohio draft officials believe the new registrants will be called simultaneously with men who registered earlier.

As soon as the registration cards of the 463,500 men who signed up in the state have been numbered, the 330 local boards in Ohio will post the lists of registrants and their serial numbers.

More Rigid Regulations Put On Time Payment Purchases

You will need more money for down payments and will have less time to pay for articles purchased on the installment plan after March 23, under more rigid anti-inflation restrictions announced today by the Federal Reserve bank.

Taking further steps to prevent the public from making unnecessary purchases as earnings increase, the federal banking agency boosted the down payment from one-fifth to one-third of the purchase price on a number of household articles, including refrigerators, washing machines, ironers, vacuum cleaners, electric dishwashers, room unit air conditioners, radios and musical instruments.

These articles must be paid for in 15 months instead of 18 months, the limit under the previous set-up.

The 18-month limit will be retained for residential modernization, plumbing, furnaces, water heaters, water pumps and pianos. The initial payment on these articles must be equal to 20 per cent of the cost. Previously it was 15 per cent. The 20-per cent down payment also

Gather Forces For Expected Invasion Move

Planes Smash At Enemy Fleet Landing Troops On Nearby Islands; Plan 'Offensive' Defense But Wait Arrival Of Aid From Allies.

(By United Press)

MELBOURNE, Australia — Australia—counting heavily on American and other Allied aid—mobilized maximum fighting strength and battered Japanese invaders of New Guinea with bombs today in expectation of an imminent enemy offensive from the north.

The Japanese sweep over Java island and arrival of high Netherlands East Indies officials, including Lt. Gov. Huburtus J. Van Mook, in Australia was regarded here as a final warning and an emergency meeting of Prime Minister John Curtin's cabinet hurried plans for countermeasures.

Full results of Australian air attacks on Japanese invasion fleets at Salamaua and Lae, on the north coast of New Guinea were uncertain, but it was understood that heavy casualties were inflicted on the strong enemy forces that seized a foothold on the Gulf of Huon.

Japanese bombers also were reported to have renewed raids on Port Moresby.

Australia had counted on stronger Allied resistance in the Java mountains and Dutch officials arriving here emphasized that the battle would go on in the interior despite Japanese claims that the stronghold of Bandoeng had been taken and that the entire island had been surrendered.

Van Mook, indicating that a refugee government would be set up in Australia, said that the battle would be carried on to the last man, although it was acknowledged that loss of Bandoeng had increased vastly the difficulties of the Dutch forces.

(Tokyo radio said that all of the island of Java had capitulated.)

The most vigorous military measures already have been taken in Australia and orders have been given to emulate the Dutch if necessary in carrying out a "scorched earth" policy, especially in the sparsely settled northern areas that include the Broome and Wyndham air bases and Port Darwin.

The first air of Australian defense strategy is extreme mobility of land and air forces to permit the maximum concentration of power at threatened points, but behind this is the idea that only offensive action will stop the Japanese.

The idea that natural obstacles, including thousands of square miles of waterless desert, will stop the Japanese is not strongly held, although these obstacles are

RETURN: British Smash At Essen, Site Of Krupp Works

(By Associated Press)

LONDON—The RAF hammered Essen, the home of Germany's great Krupp munitions works, last night, keeping up a 'round-the-clock schedule of air blows at industrial centers behind the German lines, the air ministry announced today.

Essen, to which the RAF was returning for the first time since last Nov. 8 and 9 when the Krupp works also were heavily bombed, was the chief target of night raiders which spread over the industrial Ruhr district. Nazi air fields in occupied Holland and France and docks at Ostend and LeHavre also were bombed.

Eight British bombers failed to return.

The assault followed a daylight raid on the Matford plant at Poissy yesterday—the second new assault in six days on factories in the Paris area supplying the Nazi war machine—and was described as "on much the same scale" as the heavy pounding of the Renault works near Paris last Tuesday night.

Flames spurting up so high that low-flying British fliers could look up at them were left by the RAF at the Matford plant.

TRANSFER: Malayan Victor Now Tries To Beat MacArthur

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON—The war department announced today that the Japanese conqueror of Malaya, General Tomoyuki Yamashita, had been transferred to command of the invaders in the Philippines.

General Yamashita succeeds Lieutenant General Masaharu Homma, who is reported to have committed suicide because of chagrin over his failure to destroy General Douglas MacArthur's outnumbered defending force.

The shift of commanders was reported in a communique which said for the past 24 hours, fighting had ceased altogether on the Batan peninsula front.

Some 600 miles to the south, however, brisk skirmishes were reported in the vicinity of Digos, on Davao gulf, on the southern Philippine island of Mindanao.

The nature of developments on Mindanao, where the Japanese have extended their occupation from the area around the city of Davao to the city of Zamboanga, was not disclosed.

General Yamashita, the new commander in chief, has established field headquarters at San Fernando, in Pampanga province some 40 miles from the Batan front lines.

AUSSIES ATTACK JAPS EFFECTING ISLAND LANDING

counted on to aid the defense forces.

An important factor, authorities said, will be the network of air fields which now permit Allied fighter planes in Australia to operate at short range against any threatened area. These airdromes now are springing up in mushroom fashion.

In the last few weeks many thousands of additional troops have become available to reinforce the regular army. Thousands of civilians have joined the volunteer defense forces.

The greatest need is still for airplanes and tanks but guns also are needed to replace Australian equipment lost in Libya, Greece, Crete and Malaya.

The urgency of reinforcements was emphasized by the speed with which the Japanese struck at New Guinea in order to seize Salamaua and Lae.

At those points they were 425 miles away from the Australian continent. But admittedly the Australian forces in all New Guinea were of limited strength.

The small Australian home defense corps withdrew before the invasion troops to the hills of the interior after effecting a thorough scorched-earth demolition of all military and supply installations, government communiques said.

As soon as the news of the invasion had reached the government, Australian planes raced out to the attack.

They apparently caught the Japanese by surprise. They dived down on warships and transports, through a rain of anti-aircraft shells, to bomb and machine gun. By the time Japanese fighter planes arrived to challenge them it was too late. All Australian planes returned safely to base.

Early reports to the air ministry indicated that the Aussie airmen had scored direct hits on enemy ships but visibility was poor and pilot reports were delayed.

In a prelude to their invasion of New Guinea, Japanese planes bombed Bululo, the north coast island mining center, by daylight Saturday.

At dawn yesterday, a large enemy fleet steamed into the Gulf of Huon and while warships shelled Salamaua and Lae, the Japanese launched invasion craft on which landing parties were taken ashore.

Salamaua and Lae are 30 miles apart on the Gulf of Huon. Between them and Port Moresby, on the south coast 375 miles from northeast Australia, lie 180 miles of precipitous and almost unexplored mountains, but it was believed certain here that this invasion was but the first step in a major new campaign which had as its object the conquest of all New Guinea which is half Australian, half Dutch.

By their conquest of Dutch-Portuguese Timor island, the Japanese already had established themselves only 280 miles northwest of Australia.

The enemy now had established a vast arc of invasion bases around the northern side of Australia, from the Netherlands East Indies to New Guinea. Northeast of New Guinea, they had a large force, with fully established bases, at two points in New Britain island in the Bismarcks.

Maj. Gen. Henry Gordon Bennett, who commanded the Australian forces in Malaya and escaped from Singapore, said in a national broadcast last night that he was convinced the Japanese would invade Australia by seizing the air bases at Darwin, Wyndham and Broome on the northwest coast and in Queensland, on the northeast coast opposite New Guinea.

In another broadcast, Minister of National Emergency R. J. Heffron said Japanese bombing raids on Sydney, Australia's largest city with a population of more than 1,300,000, were almost certain to come within a few weeks.

Heretofore, these offices have been filled at a full city election or when judges were chosen. This will be the first time the election machinery has been set up just for these two offices.

FARM PARITY BATTLE LOOMS

Report Roosevelt To Attack Proposal In Broadcast Scheduled Tonight.

the agriculture appropriations bill.

If adopted, it would have permitted the commodity credit corporation to sell government-owned wheat and corn at less-than-parity prices for use in feeding livestock on the farm. A provision prohibiting the CCC from selling any of its farm commodities at less than parity is contained in the appropriation measure.

It is on this point that one of the major battles will develop today, when administration leaders in the house will propose to strike the provision from the bill.

President Roosevelt is expected to attack the provision tonight when he addresses by radio a series of community farm dinners observing the anniversary of the administration's farm program.

Other hurdles to be gotten over before a final vote on the bill, include:

1—An attempt to cut the $450,000,000 allotment for soil conservation payments during the 12 months ending July 1, 1943.

2—A provision permitting the secretary of agriculture to make parity payments for the five basic crops—wheat, corn, cotton, rice and tobacco—up to $212,000,000 without a direct appropriation or other limitation.

3—Continuance of benefit payments, totaling $47,960,000, to sugar growers.

4—Continuance of the farm tenancy program. Comptroller General Lindsay Warren ruled last week that cooperative farm corporations were set up under this program "without authority" in law.

5—Appropriations for the rural electrification administration, — charged by a congressional committee as having planned to "waste" upwards of 750,000 tons of vitally needed copper on non-essential transmission lines.

13 Killed In Ohio Traffic; Richland Free of Fatalities

Only a few minor accidents were reported in the Mansfield area over a spring-like week-end which brought sunshine, then rain, and a temperature drop along with a damaging 60-mile-an-hour wind. Thirteen persons died in accidents over the state.

No injuries were reported in the half dozen collisions occurring in the city and only two persons were hurt in accidents in the area.

William C. Rinker, 30, Tiffin, suffered cuts and bruises on the head and right thigh when his car skidded and hit a tree on State Route 39 about two miles west of Mansfield.

Mrs. T. D. Richardson, Mansfield R. D. 3, received contusions of the right hip and chest when the car in which she was riding collided with another in Galion. Other passengers in the cars escaped injury.

At least 13 persons met death in traffic accidents throughout the state.

Two Richmond, Ind., men were killed in the crash of their automobile against a tree eight miles west of Eaton. They were: Eugene Coffey, 20, and Otis Sorrell, 25.

A motorcycle failed to round a curve on Route 122 east of Batavia, and George R. Medary, 33, of Mount Orab, and Robert D. Riddle, 15, of Bethel, riding tandem, were injured fatally.

A collision of two automobiles on Route 57 killed Victor King, 24, and Joseph Kretavich, 23, both of Elyria.

Miles W. Snyder, 21, of Dayton, died in an auto-truck crash near Dayton, and John Haschak, 35, a pedestrian, was killed by a car in Cleveland.

Mrs. John Rhoades, 67, Delaware, was killed and her 16-year-old grandson was seriously injured when a Chesapeake and Ohio freight train struck their automobile at a crossing.

Rodger Sammons, 21, Shadyside, was killed and four other members of an orchestra were injured when their automobile collided with a highway department truck near Bellaire.

John W. Leach, 49, Conneaut, died shortly after an auto struck him as he fixed a tire on his own car on U. S. Route 20 near Conneaut. Mrs. Anna Alexander, 69, of Cincinnati, was killed by an auto as she crossed a street in that city.

Plane Damaged By Gale At Airport

Edwin James, operations manager at the Mansfield airport, is shown here inspecting the damage to one of three planes which were torn from their moorings at the airport early today in the fierce gale which swept across Ohio. One plane was carried 100 feet in the air by the wind and badly damaged. Total damage was placed at $500, a part of which was covered by insurance.

the air. The planes were anchored with half-inch rope tied to cement blocks.

Harrington said the three planes were left outside the hangars last night for repairs. Because of the censorship of weather forecasts, attendants at the airport were unaware that the storm was approaching, Harrington said.

Damage elsewhere in the Mansfield area was limited to broken windows and shutters and tree branches blown into streets and roads.

At Canton, Dale Maple, 21, a steel worker, was electrocuted when he attempted to remove a utility pole that had brown across a highway.

Sections of Cleveland and Columbus were blacked out for a time when power lines were damaged by the wind. The gale reached 75 miles an hour in Cleveland where stones were torn from the First United Presbyterian church and trees and billboards were toppled.

Plate glass windows were shattered and utility poles were blown down in Columbus in a 60-mile wind.

Weather experts said the storm resulted from the rapid change in temperature. From a high of 60 in Mansfield Sunday, the mercury dropped to 25 early today. Snow began falling before daylight and approximately an inch covered the ground at noon.

Snow squalls, typical of March, reduced visibility almost to zero at times this morning and the snow packing on roads and streets brought crews into action spreading salt and cinders. Rainfall before the snow measured 26 of an inch Sunday and last night.

The wind was expected to diminish in velocity this afternoon and tonight, but the weatherman said snow flurries will continue. It will be colder tonight, he said.

The reports of the switch in Japanese commanders was eloquent testimony to the extent General MacArthur has upset the Japanese timetable for the conquest of the islands.

General MacArthur, who relayed the information about Homma to the war department yesterday, emphasized that the reports were not yet completely verified but emanated from sources "hitherto regarded as reliable."

Because the undercover system from which MacArthur obtains information from behind the enemy lines has been uncanny in its efficiency in the past, the capital was inclined to place considerable faith in the reports that General Homma had committed hari-kari.

MANSFIELD RATIONS BOARD TO BE IN SESSION TWICE DAILY

Extending its office hours to take care of the increased duties that have been handed to it in recent weeks, the Mansfield rationing board will hold both morning and afternoon sessions henceforth, Chairman James Bailey announced today.

Heretofore, the board has been receiving applications for tires and passenger cars from 2 to 4 p. m. daily. Hereafter, Bailey said, all car cases will be considered between 10 a. m. and noon daily, and tire cases from 2 to 4 p. m.

The board has received unofficial word that new trucks which have been frozen on dealers' sales floors by orders of the Office of Price Administration will be released for rationing shortly. When official word on this is received, these cases will be considered in the forenoon sessions along with passenger car cases.

General problems relating to rationing of tires, cars, and sugar were discussed at a meeting yesterday in the city building of all rationing boards in the county. The meeting was called by Bailey, who is county rationing co-ordinator as well as chairman of the Mansfield board.

Of the 100 new passenger cars allotted to Richland county for March, April and May, 19 have been allotted to the Shelby board, Bailey announced. Other boards in the county are referring their new car applications to the Mansfield board since, with one exception, the towns they represent have no auto sales agencies. The one exception is an agency which had only one new car on hand when the freezing order was issued.

Tire and tube authorizations issued by the Mansfield board last week were:

RAF Raiders Batter Germany as Reds Drive New Wedge Between Nazi Outposts.

Drive Wedge Between 2 Nazi Strongholds

MOSCOW —(AP)— Russian soldiers fighting unceasingly in the snow to weaken the unexpected German spring offensive were reported today to have captured the city of Sychevka, driving a wedge midway between the Nazi strongholds of Rzhev and Vyazma on the central front.

Dispatches from the wintry battleline told of the sweep of the red army into the city 125 miles due west of Moscow after a two-day battle in which it was stated virtually all of the 15,000 men of the German 48th Division were wiped out.

The Russians were said to be meeting more and more German reserves on the central front, with Adolf Hitler drawing heavily on his strength in the "deep rear."

(The staggering cost Germany is paying in Russia was told in a Berlin dispatch to the Bern, Switzerland, newspaper Der Bund. It reported official Berlin circles acknowledged total German losses of 1,500,000 soldiers since the invasion began last June 22 but said the Germans insisted these losses were "absolutely bearable.'

(Before that the last German word on losses in Russia was a statement by Adolf Hitler, on Dec. 11, when he declared war against the United States, that all German losses for the Russian war were 162,314 dead, 571,767 wounded, 33,324 missing.)

BOSTON BLACKS OUT IN 'ALERT'

Mysterious Plane Flies Over City's Port Area.

BOSTON—(INS)— An official announcement was awaited today as to the identity of the plane which roared over Boston's strategic port area and caused its first "alert" of the war.

Seven minutes after the unidentified plane's motor was picked up by aircraft detectors, defending interceptor planes aided by the long probing fingers of aircraft searchlights contacted the mystery plane and apparently established it as a friendly one. Meanwhile, all harbor lights were blacked out and anti-aircraft batteries were at their stations ready to fire.

Japanese campaign which began with landings on March 1.")

Aneta quoted an authoritative Netherland source as saying: "We Dutchmen are never hopeless. As long as there's life, there's hope. We will defend the Indies until the death."

Col. Peter De Blick, of the Netherlands East Indies army, said he did not know whether United States troops had been in action in Java, indicating the only Americans fighting there had been air-force pilots.

"The situation is serious but not hopeless," he replied to a question about whether Java now was cut off from its allies.

Col. De Blick indicated that Japanese superiority in the air and on land made the total subjection of the island a matter of days.

"We expected reinforcements in the air," he said. "They came, but they were not enough."

Claim Capture of Soerabaja, 98,000 Men

TOKYO —(From Japanese broadcasts)—(AP)— Imperial headquarters claimed today that 93,000 Dutch troops and 5,000 British and Americans had surrendered unconditionally to Japanese armies "in the vicinity of Soerabaja and Bandoeng."

The announcement made at 10:20 p. m. (Tokyo time; 9:20 a. m. EWT) said the allied forces surrendered at 3 p. m. (presumably this, too, was given in terms of Tokyo time, which would have been 2 a. m., EWT.)

The troops said to have surrendered were described by the imperial headquarters as the "main enemy forces" in the centers of resistance near the big eastern Java naval base at Soerabaja and the mountain-ringed military headquarters at Bandoeng.

British Say They Still Hold Rangoon

LONDON—(AP)—The war office still was in contact with Rangoon this morning and although the situation in the city was described as critical a military commentator said there was no confirmation of Japanese reports that it had been captured.

The commentator said the garrison at Rangoon began the demolition of the last usable military installations in the city yesterday.

Some destruction of military supplies had been carried out more than a week ago when the Japanese massed in force along the Sittang river at the northeast approaches to Rangoon.

(Earlier, the Japanese said in a communique the important port at 10 a. m. yesterday after destroying the main defense forces in the neighborhood of the capital.

The announcement also said that Pegu, 40 miles north of Rangoon, was captured Saturday afternoon.

("With the fall of Rangoon," imperial headquarters said, "the main objective of Japanese operations on the Burma front has been attained."

(Rangoon was the port of entry for war materiel and other supplies transported through Burma and into China over the Burma road for the forces of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek.)

NEW DELHI, India—(INS)—British imperial forces in Burma have been under the general command of Lieut. Gen. Sir H. R. L. G. Alexander since March 5, it was announced here today. He succeeded Lieut. Gen. George F. Hutton as commander-in-chief of the Burma area. No announcement was made as to the future service of General Hutton.

General Alexander was a colonel in service in northern India at the outbreak of the war. He is 50 years old. He served in France during the first World war and was mentioned in dispatches five times.

The Federal Reserve board added that After April 1 the credit value of used cars will be based on either the purchase price or the average retail value as set up in official appraisal guides, whichever is lower. Previously only the purchase price of the new car was used as a base.

Purpose of the change is to hold down the prices of used cars which are in heavy demand as the result of the cessation of new automobile production.

AVG Fliers Move Out of Rangoon

AMERICAN VOLUNTEER GROUP HEADQUARTERS, Burma — (UP) — American fliers fought the Japanese from a new base "somewhere in Burma" today, having abandoned the bomb-pitted airfields of Rangoon.

The intrepid "Flying Tigers," in which every man is an ace, lifted their "weary" planes through a smoke pall over the capital about the first of March while the ground crew headed northward in battered jeep cars.

Bob Neale of Seattle, Wash., squadron leader, said Rangoon was smoke-covered and completely deserted when the Yanks circled the great Shwedagon pagoda and headed northward.

Neale is leaving for a rest in China, and Arvid Olson of Chicago and Los Angeles is taking command of the squadron in Burma. Neale has missed only two of the AVG's battles with the Japanese and is credited with 12 enemy planes. He is the senior Yankee pilot.

I found Neale in a dust cloud raised by American-made Tomahawks taking off at this lonely airport.

He said the AVG made "some sort of record" during two of its last days in Rangoon, shooting down 43 Japanese fighter planes and bombers.

Monthly payments to fit your own pocketbook

YOU MUST PAY at least one-fourth of your total federal income tax by March 16th. If you do not, your entire tax becomes due at once.

If you need additional cash in order to pay your tax on March 16th, and if you have a job, you can borrow the money at Household Finance. Then you may repay your loan in small monthly instalments. See in the table below how you may choose a convenient payment plan.

All you do

All you do to apply for a Household Finance loan is to tell us how much you need and how you wish to repay. Household Finance loans are made in three ways. 1. On your personal note. GEN. JOHNSON: Proposes Unified Army, Navy Command

By GEN. HUGH S. JOHNSON

WASHINGTON — When Leon Henderson's men begin stopping your automobile and taking away from it one of its four tires to "give" (does he mean sell?) to a preferred user, he will be doing much more than confiscating the value of that tire.

Gen. Johnson.

You can't get a replacement and a car with only three wheels is about as useful as scissors with only one blade.

He will be taking the value out of $1,000 worth of property for every $10 worth of second-hand rubber he gets for the "preferred user" or for the uses of government.

But Leon is funny that way. He doesn't seem to give a damn.

That's exactly what he is doing to the automobile dealers. He won't let them sell their stocks of new and second-hand cars and he won't buy them. He wants them for a reserve.

It will cost the dealer somewhere around $20 a month per car in interest, expenses, rent, insurance and other carrying charges to do that until he is busted. Then the sheriff will presumably come in and try to auction them off to satisfy the debts.

It has not been stated what happens then. Maybe Henderson will buy them in for ten cents on the dollar — or something.

Now typewriter dealers and the part of the public that uses typewriters are threatened with the same kind of deal. The government doesn't say it wants the typewriters. It only wants to use the typewriter factories. But it wants to "ration" the distributed stock among "preferred" users.

The only preferred users that are apparent are the reputed 30,000 regular and part-time copy writers of handouts for government agencies. But there may be some other purpose in this apparently harebrained lunacy.

You are familiar with the heavily-laden trucks, sometimes strings of them, especially around harvest time, carrying precious farm-produced merchandise toward towns and cities. Occasionally you have seen a team of horses or mules, usually hauling an implement, but very rarely have you seen both animals on the concrete. They, or at least one of them, is driven on the grass at the side of the surfaced road. If the load they were drawing was considerable both of them were on the shoulders.

Mr. Henderson's automobile restrictions apply to farmers as well as city folk. The roads they use cost us billions of dollars mostly paid by automobile users.

These roads are absolutely unfit for animal-drawn hauling, because hooves, even when especially shod, slip, and chiefly because an unyielding surface promptly "stoves up" an animal's front legs and ruins its usefulness.

It won't do to say "we will go back to the horse and wagon days." In the first place the horse population has so dwindled that it would take longer to bring enough horses to do the work to maturity than it would to grow Brazilian rubber.

The great wagon factories are all gone. In the present steel shortage there would probably not be enough available to build and equip new plants and provide for the wagons themselves. Then there would arise the question of a leather deficiency to manufacture the miles of harness needed to pull the vehicles.

If all this were avoided we would still have to consider the problem of re-distributing into much smaller and more numerous units the farm supply and marketing villages, two-thirds of which are now too distant from the farms they now serve to continue by wagon only without the loss of millions of man-hours of farm labor.

It would be well for Mr. Henderson's bright young theorists to learn something more about their country than they can get in a college, a book, or at Washington, D. C.

STATE BRIDGE INCOME HITS RECORD IN '41

Commission Reports Profits of $629,000, Highest In History.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS — Operating revenue and profits from Ohio's four state-operated bridges rose to record levels in 1941 while expenses were the lowest in the history of their operation, the state bridge commission reported today.

The commission reported that operating revenue in 1941 totaled $906,199, an increase of $28,583 over 1940. Gross operating profits of $744,222 represented a gain of 4.4 per cent over 1940, and net profits were $629,194, a gain of 29 per cent over the previous year.

But the future is "shrouded in uncertainty due to rationing of tires, restrictions on the sale of new automobiles, inevitable increases in insurance rates and other accompaniments of wartime economy," the report said.

Operations in 1941 had indicated that the Steubenville-Weirton and Sandusky Bay bridges would be free bridges by 1945 and the East Liverpool-Chester bridge by 1848.

The commission said all four bridges were in excellent repair and would not require extensive maintenance in the next several years.

Traffic and revenues of the Sandusky bridge were reduced due to closing of five miles of state route 2 for reconstruction last fall. Completion of these repairs this year promised eventually to stimulate traffic on the bridge, the report said.

Gross revenue from the Sandusky bridge totaled $295,774 in 1941, the largest in four years but nearly $2,000 under the peak year, 1937.

The commission had paid off $978,000 in bonds of the original issue of $1,925,000 on the Sandusky span by the end of 1941. The sinking fund contained $164,984 for further bond and interest payments.

The report reported 1,105,475 paid vehicle crossings on the Sandusky bridge during 1941, not counting bus passengers. This represented the greatest use since the record of 1,172,460 in 1937.

Net profits from the bridge's operation last year totaled $209,519, an increase of more than 12 per cent over 1940.

A Cleveland motorist has Mansfield police to thank today for preventing him from running out of gas on the way from Cleveland to Nashville, Tenn. Learning by radio from Cleveland police that Miller Wilfred of Cleveland, had the wrong set of keys to open his gasoline tank, Mansfield patrolmen kept a watch out for him and stopped him as he passed through Mansfield. Police were unable to help Wilfred get his gas tank open but he said he would probably have to knock the gas cap off and buy a replacement.

Passing a school building he remarked: "There's where I took my first teacher's examination." No response. Then he stopped twice for red lights, and announced: "Pretty soon we won't be bothered with lights." No response. Then noting for the first time that the back seat of the car was empty, he sat and roared with laughter, while passersby looked at him as though he were crazy. When he got back to the station, the two girls were counting their money to see if they had bus fare.

HILL URGES FORMATION OF WAR COUNCIL

Advocates Supreme Command To Improve Nation's Striking Power.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — A proposal that President Roosevelt set up a super war strategy board, headed by a single commander-in-chief for both army and navy was made today by Senator Hill of Alabama, the Democratic whip.

Speaking as a veteran member of the senate military affairs committee, Hill told reporters that he had become convinced that immediate unification of command here over land, sea and air forces was necessary if the United States was to develop its maximum military striking power.

Although the Alabama senator professed to be expressing only his personal viewpoint, the fact that the suggestion came from an important administration supporter in congress was regarded as significant.

Applauding the recent reorganization of the army which gave the air force equal rank with the ground and supply branches, Hill said he felt the appointment of one supreme commander for army, navy and air, operating under the president, would carry this principle to its logical conclusion.

"We must concentrate all of our forces and resources in one great striking machine and if we are going to have this machine working at maximum efficiency, the three main components of our military forces must be co-ordinated and integrated to the greatest possible extent," he declared.

"That can not be done," he continued, "unless there is a super staff, headed by a supreme commander, working here in Washington to make strategy decisions and to assume the responsibility of coordinating our military efforts."

The Alabama senator said he felt the president had ample authority under the war powers act to set up such a strategy board.

WASHINGTON — (AP) — Censorship Director Byron Price says cooperation of the press and radio in war censorship has been "excellent" but he warns that "dark hours may be ahead for free speech in the United States" if voluntary censorship fails.

Price discussed the voluntary censorship system in a radio forum conducted over the Mutual network last night. LAUNCH RAIL CRASH PROBE

Army Investigates Wreck of Trains Which Claimed Lives of Soldiers.

(By International News Service)

GRANBY, Mo.—Three investigations were conducted today into the head-on collision between two St. Louis and San Francisco railroad trains in which seven persons were killed, four of them soldiers, and 27 others were injured.

An army board of inquiry was making its own investigation, while the railroad was conducting another and Dr. J. R. Reynolds, Newton county coroner, swore in a jury for a formal inquest.

The collision Saturday night was between the crack 'Frisco flyer, "Will Rogers," eastbound, and a special train carrying 230 troops from Camp Grant, Ill., in the opposite direction.

Military police guarded the scene of the wreck while the investigations were in progress. James Hilton, assistant to the general manager of the railroad, said he would have no statement at this time, but other officials said the crash apparently was due to a mixup in signals.

They also said the engineers of both trains, which should have passed four miles east of Granby, would be suspended pending the outcome of the investigations.

Leaves Hospital For Jail Cell In Shooting on Farm

Willis Harris, 46, former Mansfield reformatory guard who is being held in connection with the shooting of James Wilson, 30, a reformatory parolee, Feb. 9 at a farm southeast of Mansfield, was moved from General hospital to the county jail Saturday afternoon.

Harris is awaiting county grand jury action on a charge of shooting with intent to wound. He allegedly shot Wilson while confined to his bed with a broken back, an injury suffered more than two months ago in a farm accident.

Harris has been under guard at the hospital since the charge was filed against him. Wilson, who was shot through the abdomen, is recovering. The shooting occurred on the S. A. Foltz farm. Wilson had been paroled to Foltz in January and was employed as a farm hand.

REPORT RELAXATION OF AXIS SUB WARFARE OF EAST COAST

(By United Press)

WASHINGTON—Naval sources said today there appeared to be a slight relaxation in the Axis submarine campaign off the Atlantic coast but they were unwilling to concede that the worst is over.

The navy has announced the submarine sinking of only two ships in American coastal waters in the last week—the 8,215-ton ore carrier Marore and the 2,850-ton Norwegian motorship Leif. Two other ships were believed sunk but the cause was unknown.

They believed that the drop in the number of ships sunk may be because of the departure of some of the submarines for home ports or of improved anti-submarine measures by our navy, or a combination of both.

It was pointed out that other submarines may be on the way to relieve those which may have left these waters.

Here is the latest unofficial summary of ships attacked and sunk in the various Atlantic coastal areas since Jan. 14:

Area	Attacked	Sunk
U. S. Coast	30(x)	27
Caribbean	16	12
Canadian	26	26
Total	72	65

(x)—Includes two ships reported overdue and presumed lost.

TAKES OWN LIFE

Mrs. Blanche C. Burns, 43, Dies at Hospital Sunday.

An overdose of a sleeping potion taken Saturday afternoon resulted in the death at General hospital yesterday of Mrs. Blanche C. Burns, 43, proprietress of Wickcliffe Manor, tea room and rooming house at 415 Park avenue west.

Dr. L. B. McCullough, Richland county coroner, said that Mrs. Burns had committed suicide. Police reported that she had been despondent for some time. Her husband, Howard Burns, died in Marion about four years ago.

Mrs. Burns was found by a roomer at her home, V. J. Rogers, who notified police. She was then rushed to General hospital where she died yesterday morning. The body was removed to the Wappner Funeral home, pending funeral arrangements.

Dr. McCullough said that Mrs. Burns left a note which read: "If possible just cremate me and put me in with Howard. I just can't go on any longer. I am so tired."

Mrs. Burns was born in Mansfield on Oct. 2, 1898 and spent the greater part of her life in Marion. She came back to Mansfield two years ago. Survivors are a brother, Lester Kubiae of Youngstown and a sister, Mrs. Marvin Olson of West Alice, Wis.

Billings Starts Tour Following Burial Of Mooney

SAN FRANCISCO — (INS) — Burial services were to be conducted today for Tom Mooney following the greatest final tribute ever paid a labor figure on the west coast.

Five thousand persons filed past Mooney's bier in San Francisco's Civic auditorium yesterday and heard him eulogized as a prophet of the current international strife.

Warren K. Billings, convicted as Mooney's accomplice in the fatal San Francisco Preparedness day bombing of 1916, said he was leaving immediately after the funeral on a nation-wide speaking tour to urge freedom for Earl Browder, American Communist leader serving a four-year prison term for passport falsification.

Mooney died Friday at the age of 58. He had suffered recurrent ill health since he was granted a full pardon by Gov. Culbert L. Olson in January 1939.

Legion Gives 'Iron Lung'

AN EXAMPLE of good use of money for benefit of the entire community is provided by McVey Post American Legion in its purchase of an "iron lung," for use at Mansfield General hospital.

Mechanical respiration, such as is successfully produced by the "iron lung," has been the means of saving many lives by bridging over periods of respiratory weakness or failure, and it is important to have one of the devices quickly available in emergencies.

As a non-profit community institution, made possible by public contributions, Mansfield General hospital has, through the course of years, been the recipient of numerous gifts and bequests intended to increase its capacity for service to the sick and injured.

It is gratifying to know that the American Legion, in addition to its many other helpful civic activities, finds it financially possible to make this contribution to hospital facilities.

Replenish Coal Supply Now

QUITE different from the effort to prevent people from buying sugar in advance of need, is the government's suggestion to immediately lay in a sufficient coal supply to last through the season, and also to fill the bin, for next winter's use, as soon as possible.

Transportation difficulties, industrial needs and labor shortage are principal elements in the anticipated coal shortage, and it is distribution of demand that is sought. Coal purchased now and in the spring will ease later requirements and equalize production and delivery.

There is ordinarily a need, in this vicinity, to have some furnace heat in homes through May, and now would be a good time to make sure that there's enough coal in the bin to carry through.

Season's End for Community Players

NO FURTHER need to urge patronage of the Mansfield Community Players, or even to make reference to the civic value of this organization, which has served Mansfield as a vehicle of enjoyable entertainment for the past sixteen years.

Enough to say that tomorrow evening, at John Simpson Junior high school auditorium, the final of this season's plays will be presented, offering brief surcease from trouble, vexation and worry.

These local talent plays, in addition to being amusing and entertaining to audiences, provide pleasant experience, relaxation and training for participants, and it is interesting to recall the hundreds of amateur thespians who have at some time taken part in "a show" and to contemplate their pleasant recollections of the event.

Little can be known now about what the future may bring, but it may at least be hoped that no changes will come about which will prevent Mansfield Community Players from continuing through next season—and many more.

Unite Against Common Enemy

THERE is no unifier like a common enemy. China has learned that in her five years of war with Japan. Now the Filipinos are learning this too.

With twenty-three tribes, exclusive of the dwarf Negritos, who are of a different race, and at least three religions, Christian, Mohammedan and pagan, the Filipinos have been pretty thoroughly divided. Some have liked our rule and some have not. But whatever our faults, the Japanese are worse, and the Filipinos are finding this out. Knowledge of the bombing of Manila and worse atrocities has spread throughout the islands.

When you face an enemy like that, and are helped by some one of different race and creed, the differences are apt to lose importance. When the war is over, whether they are independent or under our government, the Filipinos will be much more of a unit than ever before.

Forgotten Discoverer

EVEN the most justly earned fame sometimes has a certain accidental character. Christopher Columbus is immortal, and rightly so, for his discovery of America. Yet had he not achieved this triumph, America would not long have remained undiscovered. Only eight years later a Portuguese admiral, Pedro Alvares Cabral, on his way round Africa sailed too far west, and was carried to the coast of Brazil. So if Columbus had turned back, as his sailors urged, before reaching his goal, we might be celebrating April 23, 1500, instead of October 12, 1492, and called the holiday Cabral day.

Cabral is famous for other achievements. He discovered Madagascar, opened commerce between Europe and India, and made Portugal for a few years the richest country in the world.

Censorship's Weakness

CENSORSHIP, absolutely necessary in wartime, runs into some odd complications and it would appear that anything which shouldn't be printed SHOULDN'T BE TALKED ABOUT—for newspapers are merely mediums for quick distribution of information that, in olden times, was conveyed from one person to another "by word of mouth."

Little wonder that the West Palm Beach, Fla., Post was confused on the occasion of a recent sea disaster in that area, and commented: "Navy wouldn't release a story and whole populace was talking about it—If it's anything WE can't print, YOU shouldn't be talking about it."

A New York judge having ruled that a zither is an "instrument of torture," decision in the saxophone case is anxiously awaited.

Late arrival of the March lion is credited to censorship delay.

It isn't enough to merely outdollar the enemy.

Japanese Look Toward 'Big Day'

—By JAMES R. YOUNG

Editor's Note—Following is the fifth and final article of a series by James R. Young, for 13 years chief of the International News Service correspondents in the Far East, on alien espionage on the American west coast.

(Written Expressly For International News Service.)

OF THE 33,000 Jap Aliens in California, many of whom will be moved out of defense and military areas by the army, five per cent have been coralled, according to figures released by the attorney general's office in Washington. One farm bureau group has asked martial law.

Special Federal Attorney Thomas C. Clark, placed in charge of eight western states where aliens reside, has intimated a modified martial law may be necessary.

Exactly seven weeks to the day, after having been warned of dangers in the Sacramento valley district, FBI agents took action and found what they themselves now describe as "potentially dangerous aliens," including Japanese army and navy officers (reserve), aerial bombs, uniforms and signal equipment. From Canada to Mexico, strict precautionary measures were taken weeks ago against Jap sabotage. Authorities in those two countries did not concern themselves with unemployment insurance for aliens, or social security numbers.

YOUNG

Those officials had no problem of civil licenses, and civil service for hundreds of employes in government jobs at state capitals, in their police, fire or water departments.

Organized Mexican railway workers have warned of Jap plots south of the border. Canadian officials at Nanaimo ordered the Japanese to get going.

AS THE MEXICANS and Canadians took the necessary steps, a power cutoff at Seattle, affecting an aircraft plant, shipyards, and industrial defense plants gave the people of the northwest a sample of how sabotage in the hands of a few persons could wreak havoc.

Saboteurs were held responsible for a $100,000 fire in an East Los Angeles plant. A San Francisco pier guard was fired on three times as a light cruiser passed him. He was later cited for his bravery in repelling the attack. A short radio blackout frightened Los Angeles as a sub appeared near San Pedro harbor.

It is no wraith of the imagination, this menace to the west coast, which I studied intensely for three weeks. Tokyo has openly declared that the coast can be circumvented as easily as the Maginot line. Blackouts have occurred. There was no coordination worthy of a paragraph until the executive order from Washington. Japan, I warn, is counting on a certain proportion of her residents in the United States, as Axis powers rely on fifth columnists in other lands, our own included, as raids have shown.

Many trusted Japanese-Americans have been false to the country of their birth or adoption. Their real allegiance is to the Sun Goddess. No deceit is beyond them in serving Japan and the Nazi Gauleiters who rule her.

JAPANESE propaganda, culture and coercion caused some Japanese to commit suicide from guilt. One was a famous Los Angeles doctor who headed one of Japan's giant spy cliques.

"As soon as we began to drift away from the patriotic societies, or expressed a regard for the United States," one Jap explained, "we were scorned by our neighbors, and reported to the consulate. We knew that the consul then reported to Japan and from our relatives we began to feel pressure, and a demand that we return to the imperial way. So we returned to our associations and worshiped the emperor and said our banzai for Japan."

The Pacific coast has been accustomed to Japanese for so long that it was difficult to awaken to the fact that the utmost degree of alertness must be maintained so long as there is no mass internment.

In the summer of 1940 Japan began a campaign to bring 1,500 Japanese from North and South America to undergo Jap-Nazi bund training, oldsters who were given instructions for the "big day." Those Japanese gentry filtered into Japan for the imperial Japanese Ausland society and its meetings.

Those 1,500 Japanese returned to Hawaii, the Philippines, Mexico, Latin America and the west coast to prepare for the "big day."

VICTORY in the Pacific is certain, but it will be longer and more difficult until we bear down with complete military control. Fire, arson, sabotage, murder, explosions, riots and bloodshed face us.

The armed forces on the coast today are on the alert. The lesson of espionage, sabotage, the fifth column as a whole, has been taught from Spain to the Philippines and Hawaii, in recent years, is today operating under Japanese tutelage and trickery at Lisbon and Buenos Aires, and in our own country, through traitors and Jap sympathizers, some of our own blood.

Timely Editorial

Natural Thing to Do.

One of the oddest of recent local news items, at least to veteran riders of New York taxicabs, is the story of the strange and, so far as we know, unprecedented action of Michael Calabrese, a cab driver. It appears that six months ago Mr. Calabrese, in making change for a fare, mistook a $5 bill for a $1 bill; before he could rectify the mistake the passenger had vanished. What to do?

Mr. Calabrese has a wife and two children, and he makes only $25 a week. However, instead of doing what almost any other man would have done in the circumstances, the unpredictable Calabrese turned in the extra money to the police. With the passage of the legal time limit, during which no claimant appeared, the police told Mr. Calabrese the money was his.

He promptly turned it over to the Red Cross, because, he said, "it seemed the natural thing to do." The more one ponders this case the more remarkable it seems. Mr. Calabrese's fellow men, most of whom have notorious clay feet, can only regard him with admiration, wonderment and a touch of envy.—New York Herald-Tribune.

Everyday Poem

Old Fogy, Time.

Time is curious; it moves
Fast or slow at will.
Now the hours go swiftly by,
Then they're hard to fill.

Curious, Old Fogy Time,
Caring not at all
If the world goes round or if
Mighty nations fall.

Time is solemn; time is gay,
Time is what you will,
Time it goes its fleeting way;
Then, it's hard to fill.

Plan Central Information Agency To Supplant Existing Patchwork

—By DREW PEARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

WASHINGTON—Plans are quietly under way for a consolidation of the various government war information agencies into a single body similar to the British ministry of information.

The agencies to be affected are the Office of Facts and Figures, headed by brilliant Librarian of Congress Archibald MacLeish; Office of the Co-ordinator of Information, headed by hard-hitting Colonel "Wild Bill" Donovan; the Office of Government Reports, headed by lackadaisical White House Secretary Lowell Mellett; and several branches of the Rockefeller's committee on Latin America.

The press bureaus of the war and navy departments and the War Production Board will remain independent, but would be required to work in close co-operation with the new central information agency.

No name has yet been decided upon; also the director is still under discussion.

Most favored for the job is MacLeish, who has made strenuous efforts to eliminate the overlapping and cross-purposing of the existing patchwork set-up. Under a recent White House order, all speeches and other pronouncements by cabinet members and war chiefs must clear first through him.

Very hot after the proposed new post is Mellett—despite the fact that his record as government reports boss is one of the sourest in the administration. Mellett's method of coping with a problem is to hold long conferences and then do nothing.

Note—Government authorities are greatly concerned over the revival of fascist propaganda in recent weeks. For a while after Pearl Harbor these elements submerged, but they are again becoming increasingly vocal. Among the most active are certain publishers and pro-Axis champions who were leaders of the isolationist movement before the war.

More Axis Diplomats.

A STATE DEPARTMENT official quietly packed his bags and left town last week, on an errand that has no parallel in the colorful history of diplomacy.

His destination is South America, and his orders are to pick up the corralled Axis diplomats—250 of them—and bring them to the U. S. A.

All the South American countries except two (Argentina and Chile) have broken relations with the Axis—but how to get the diplomats home? Uncle Sam, who urged the break, is taking responsibility for the shipment.

Already the Germans, Italians, and Japanese from Central America, Mexico, and the Caribbean countries have been brought here, to share the luxurious lot of German-Italian diplomats in White Sulphur Springs, W. Va., and of Japanese diplomats in Hot Springs, Va.

The new shipment will be sent to the same resort locations, to await transfer home.

Note—Suppose a Nazi submarine goes after the ship bringing the 250 Axis diplomats from Latin-America to the U. S. A.?

Naval Base Probe.

ONE of the cardinal "don't" of government press censors is against publication of information about construction jobs at offshore military and naval bases—such as the type and size of the contracts, identity of the contractors, and so on.

Newsmen are warned that if the name of the contractor were disclosed, spies would try to get jobs with the company. Cost of the contract is equally taboo, for it is possible to determine from this the size of the fighting force at the base.

While necessary as a war measure, this policy has its drawbacks for John Q. Taxpayer, for it enables a profiteering contractor to get away with murder. He can load excessive, "administrative" expenses on his cost-plus bill to the government. He can use cheap materials and do inferior workmanship. And the newspapers can't breathe a word about it.

However, if such contractors expect to dodge the Truman investigating committee, they are in for a surprise. The committee is planning an eagle-eyed survey of contract work at our territorial bases. One of its chief targets will be the U. S. naval base at Puerto Rico.

Among other things, the committee wants to find out why Rear Admiral John H. Hoover, commandant of the Tenth Naval district, enjoys such palatial living quarters at his San Juan headquarters. Three swanky homes, costing from $20,000 to $40,000 were built for Hoover and two aides last year.

The Truman committee also plans to ask some blunt questions about the new naval airfield at San Juan, which cost the government a huge cost-plus fee. This field sags in the middle and is sometimes over-run with water. Investigators have learned that it was constructed on a site so swampy that a pile, driven into the foundation when work began, disappeared.

Note—In view of censorship restrictions, it will be interesting to see how far the Truman committee goes in its report on Puerto Rico contracts.

Socking Uncle Sam.

THE house ways and means committee heard plain talk from Undersecretary of War Robert P. Patterson at a secret hearing on the Cochran bill to prohibit states and municipalities from taxing federal war expenditures within their boundaries.

This extraordinary practice has became a very grave problem and Patterson warned that unless it was ended the government will have to shell out $1,500,000,000 this year in sales taxes to states and municipalities.

"It probably will be a lot more than that," Patterson said, "because a number of states which do not have sales taxes are getting ready to enact them unless congress acts promptly. Every state thinks it has as much right as the next to tax war materials sold within its borders. Many have patriotically held off, but they naturally resent the fact that others are cashing in."

The war department chief pointed out that this taxation means a very big increase in army and navy appropriations.

"Congress can't expect us," he declared, "to get a 100 per cent return on every dollar appropriated when part of that dollar must go to pay sales taxes."

Merry-Go-Round.

Irish Minister Robert Brennan reports that rural communities in Ireland have an involuntary black-out every night because of lack of kerosene, normally imported from the United States. . . . The Shanghai branch of National City Bank of New York has been obliged to close, and to surrender 50 per cent of its deposits to the Japanese bank of Mitsui. . . . Thousands of young men just receiving commissions in Washington and vicinity are taking up arms against something besides the Axis, namely, local tailors who charge $50 for a tunic, $15 for slacks, and $80 for an overcoat. . . . Girls are replacing boys in the telegraph messenger services in Washington. . . . Stephen Rockefeller, five-year-old son of Inter-American Co-ordinator Nelson Rockefeller, is studying Spanish.

Watching Trends

—By JACK STINNETT

WASHINGTON—Is the United States all-out for war?

The answer is an emphatic "NO." The most enthusiastic optimists around these parts will tell you that. But we are coming along.

In the Pennsylvania station in New York City the other day, it looked like the subway at "quittin' time," except that the subways never saw the day when any station lobbies were cluttered with temporary ticket booths.

On the Jersey Flats, a score of amateur and professional junk men were picking over the rusty bones of the city dumps and hauling out everything that looked like salvage metal.

It was a cloudy, soggy day and thick smoke hung over the industrial cities north and south of Newark.

One of the nation's largest radiator (heating) companies was going full steam, its thousands of square feet of new factories glistening in the mist.

In the railroad yards at Trenton, an almost endless freight had whole sections of flat cars loaded with army trucks, their paint hardly dry.

NORTH of Philadelphia, a cluster of great red brick factories, nothing but windowless skeletons since depression days ten years ago, looked like a monkey cage. The monkeys were men, swinging on scaffolds, replacing thousands of broken window panes.

There were 54 persons on my coach, which was in one of two sections of just one of the trains that run hourly between New York and Washington. Nineteen of them were soldiers: three, sailors; and one a marine.

A lad, in civvies, sitting next to me was talking Beethoven and Wagner. "I used to be a violinist and I have composed a little," he said. I looked at his hands. The long fingers were calloused and dirty. Across the knuckle of one was a fresh, two-inch long scar. The lad grinned and started gathering his duffle. We were pulling into Wilmington. He pointed out the window to a big, reddish hulk nearing completion on the ways in a bustling shipyard. He said: "That's the second one I've wired for Uncle Sam. I'm an electrician now. I'll be here for the duration."

THE Pennsylvania railroad shops farther on were alive with steaming engines, little electrical switchers, and hundreds of cars in for repair. Beyond that, a test pilot was power diving over a new airplane factory.

In the Union Station in Washington (only a few years ago ridiculed as too big for this city ever to grow up to) the crush was terrific. It took 17 minutes by the clock, for me to get a taxi.

Sunset and Afterglow

—By CALVIN A. BYERS

AFTER the evening chores were done, I walked with the two oldest boys and Snoopy, the pup, to the highest point on the slope above the house. The puppy made circles about us, bounding along with one long ear pasted back against her head—the boys made needless wayward steps and did not seem to tire. I conserved my energy and made every movement count toward forward, upward locomotion.

At the top, we stopped and sat on a stump to rest. The sun was just above the distant, wooded hill. It seemed to be falling through a sheet of haze. The boys remarked about how big it looked and asked why it seemed so red. I explained as simply as I could that dust and vapor in the intervening air, and the refraction of the rays of light all had a part in making sunset colors.

Even as we looked the great ball of red dropped behind the trees. The boys stood close to me and held my hands and we watched it sinking down, down until only a thin animated crescent showed, like a wavering scarlet thread. Then it too dropped from sight and we stood there silent, for a moment.

"Day is dying in the west, Heaven is touching earth with rest . . ." I chanted.

"I thought that was a song in a book at church," remarked one little lad. "I didn't know it happened right here at our very home."

"The sunset is more beautiful than the sunrise, even—but sadder," said the other.

"Why?" I wondered.

"Well—maybe because sunrise is the beginning of something new, so it's fun to think about—and sunset is the end. I'm not tired, and I don't like darkness—only I won't mind, since you're along."

"But without the dark you couldn't see the moon and stars, —and you couldn't sleep so well," suggested the other brother, sagely. "Some way, I won't forget this sunset, though—I don't remember seeing the sun go down, before."

We retraced our step, down the winding brushy trail, in the amber afterglow.

Willing To Cross Continent

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm 21 years of age, and have been going steady for two years with a young man of 26 who is in the navy. Last week he wrote me to come to where he's stationed and marry him. When I asked my mother for her consent, she refused it; my parents do not think a girl of my age should go off to be married.

I have never told them about this boy, and have kept my going with him secret until I received this letter of proposal. Do you think it would be all right for me to go to him and not tell them?

I love this boy dearly and he loves me, and I know he would make me very happy. I live on the west coast, and the naval station where he is situated is on the Aalantic. A. T.

To go across the country to marry would seem a grave mistake to me. How do you know he was really in earnest when he asked you to cross the continent and marry him? He may have been just "kidding," or trying to write a flattering letter. Such a journey would take a great deal of money. If the young man has been ordered away and his ship is not at the station from which he wrote, you would indeed be in an embarrassing, if not a tragic, situation.

Please take your mother's advice, and don't think of going off to marry any man, either soldier, sailor or civilian, unless the arrangements are more definite than those you have confided to me.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

Will you be kind enough to make the necessary inquiries for me in Washington about securing an Annapolis appointment? As you see from the postmark on my letter, I'm pretty far from where I can get exact information. I hear appointments must come through one's congressman. I don't know ours, and we have absolutely no political pull.

Would-be Midshipman

There are several other ways of getting an appointment to Annapolis besides through the medium of your congressman, though that's the shortest and most direct method. Each senator and congressman has an allotment of five appointments to the naval academy. Appointments may also be secured through the naval reserves and honor schools.

Through the navy and marine corps, one hundred enlisted men may be appointed to the naval academy yearly. I'll be glad to take up this question for you by direct inquiry with the navy department or Annapolis. Your best bet is your congressman or senator.

Pitfalls of Love

(A sequel to Marriage Meddlers)
By ADELE GARRISON

The Lansfield elevator operator obeyed with such alacrity Shotwell's command to "step on it," that when we stopped at the basement I felt as if the impact of the floor was sending me to the ceiling of the car.

I managed a smile at the operator, and murmured a reassuring "It's all right; I wasn't hurt."

We went through what, with a mental grin, I termed a "veritable labyrinth" of passages, finally arriving at the furnace room. O'Hara was sitting in a tilted chair by the side of the furnace.

"All ready sir," he told my father. "The other furnace man is waiting on the other side of the door. He'll show you the entrance. And—" he hesitated—"no call to give him anything. I divided with him."

"I didn't expect you to do that," my father said. His hand went into his pocket again and came out with something which he held out to the janitor. But the man shook his head.

He led us through a passageway to an iron-studded door which he opened. Another janitor stood waiting there, and OHara turned us over to him with a brief "Here they are, Riley. Take good care of 'em."

Riley, with a quick "Good-day," led the way through a long, narrow corridor into another furnace room, and thence by devious turns to an open space with an elevator shaft. He pressed the button and spoke his only sentence of the trip.

"Just tell the operator the main floor," he said. "You'll be right near the front entrance."

Find Taxi Waiting.

"Thank you very much," my father told him. Then the elevator door opened and Shotwell followed us into the elevator.

"I'll just see if the taxi's there, sir," he said in a low voice, as we reached the ground floor.

"We'll stand in the doorway until you beckon us," my father said. We did not have to wait more than a second. The taxi, with Mr. Milner in the rear seat, was drawn up to the curb and Shotwell ushered us at once to the waiting car.

My father paused long enough, after putting me inside the car, to send his keen glance up and down both sides of the busy street.

"Where to, sir?" the driver asked.

"Turn left at the next corner," my father directed, "then right, the first chance you get. I'll give you further directions then."

"Okay!" The driver's voice subtly expressed his belief that his passengers were insane, or were escaping prisoners. But he followed directions, while my father lowered his voice to a muted whisper.

"I didn't see a single suspicions person or movement," he said. "I believe we've eluded the people who wished to find out where we were going. And it's all due to your co-operation," he added, addressing the Lansfield's manager.

"I am so glad to have been of use," Mr. Milner said, and did not speak again until after my father had kept the taxi tacking left and right for several blocks yet always proceeding southward, the driver drew up, at a word from my father, in the middle of a block where there was comparatively little traffic.

"Here is where we leave you," my father said. "I trust you're not too far from the hotel."

"No, indeed," Mr. Milner said, as he made a hasty exit from the car. When the door had closed again, my father gave an address to the driver, with an injunction to hurry. I recognized the address at once. It was that of his Greenwich Village hideaway.

"The Authority on Authorities"

SOMETIMES IT HELPS

Gaining a reputation for favoring some particular kink or quirk in bidding is bound to bring you some unusual results. On one occasion, the reputation will harm you because your partner will fear you are indulging in your specialty when you are not, and hence will mistrust you. At another time it will help, as an opponent will refuse to believe what your bidding has shown and consequently may count you as weak right where your hand is strong. You will get tricks thrown at you because of that once in a while.

West studied long and carefully before he chose a card for his opening lead. South had so often buffaloed him and his partners by using an original club bid to prevent lead of the suit and then finishing with No Trumps, that West was duly suspicious. If South was truly weak in clubs, then the suit was bunched with East, and a club opening would slaughter the contract.

So West led the club 7. After East won this with the A, he repeated the suit, with his fourth-best 2, the 10 winning. Then South finessed the diamond J, came back with the spade A, ran the remaining three clubs, finessed the diamond K with the A, took two more diamonds and the spade K, then gave up the last trick in hearts, taking 11 all told.

If anything else had been led, especially the natural lead of a spade, even though that would build an extra spade trick, nothing could have kept the defenders from cashing their two high hearts before setting up clubs, so that they would have held it to 10 tricks. Incidentally, if East had studied a bit, he would have realized that, in case of the club 7 was a fourth best, his partner would have held the K, Q and 10 above it, and so should have led the K. Hence East should have read the lead as what it was, and should have switched to a heart anyway.

Training Baby to Eat Right

By GARRY MYERS, Ph.D.

I want to tell you how little Lora came by her hearty appetite. Lora is three now. She eats what is set before her with complete enjoyment.

Lora was a breast-fed baby, fed on schedule according to the doctor's orders. When she was only a month old she was given a bottle as prescribed by the doctor once a day at a regular feeding period. This substitute provided for any possible emergency like illness of the mother, and opportunities for the mother to be away from the infant for at least a double period whenever it might be desired.

Into this bottle was introduced some fruit juice and later the juice of a vegetable—for gradual adaptation to the new tastes. From the beginning Lora was given water, orange juice and cod liver oil from a spoon. Always these were given so gently and skillfully that there was no choking or annoyance. No one else was present when Lora took food or, if they were, they acted as if absent.

When Lora was a few months old her mother would very gently put a small cup nearly full of milk or water to Lora's mouth in order to induce the infant to drink from a cup. When at first this annoyed Lora, the mother removed the cup, but repeated the performance from time to time until the youngster finally chose to drink from a cup.

Child Never Vexed.

Never was the attempt allowed to vex the child. In this way, Lora was prepared to take milk from a cup even long before her mother decided to abandon the bottle entirely. By the age of eight months Lora was entirely weaned from the mother's breast and enjoying milk either from a cup or bottle. She preferred the cup by day and the bottle on going to bed by day or night. Before Lora was fifteen months of age the bottle was completely abandoned.

When Lora was two months of age her mother began to feed her strained vegetables from a spoon. She began very, very gradually. For the first meal the mother placed the tip of a teaspoon in some vegetable broth and placed it very gently between Lora's lips. Lora liked it. Then on the spoon appeared a bit of the vegetable mash half as big as a pea. The meal of vegetable ended there. At the next meal by day Lora got from the spoon another morsel of vegetable mash (same vegetable) half the size of a pea. She liked it so well she was given a second and third, but not more.

At another meal, Lora was tried in the same delicate fashion with some carrot mash. The quantity of her semi-solids increased to a total of a spoonful at the end of another week.

Always the mother was careful not to force any food on Lora. The moment the child closed her lips or turned her head the meal was ended. But after several solid foods were included in the meal the refusal of one of them was an automatic signal to her mother to end the meal with nothing else but milk and orange juice, till the next regular time.

When Lora was a year of age she was feeding herself solid foods like carrot mash with her bare hands or a spoon and several months later could feed herself cooked cereal with milk on it.

Nobody ever talked about Lora's eating even to praise her. They took her eating for granted.

While there are auguries for a very lively and enterprising state of affairs yet there are also possibilities of peculiar, intriguing, subtle and dangerous circumstances likely to arise from unsuspected, secret or sinister sources which may undermine the best endeavors. The promising vibrations should favor travel, writing, publicity, promotion, agencies and communications.

Those whose birthday it is may expect a lively and progressive year with much activity in all directions — probably travel, correspondence, literary pursuits, promotional enterprises, publicity, as well as dealings through agencies and communications.

A child born on this day should be versatile and resourceful, quick in thought and action, ready and fluent with tongue and pen.

CHAPTER XXII

Walking down Fifth avenue Judith thought, "Emily said that a girl came to New York not to find herself but to lose herself. It happened to both of us. But was I happy before I knew Max? Was my life as satisfactory as I thought it was? No he taught me love and living. I don't feel arrogant or smug now. Max taught me what I really wanted, what I'd been missing, what my heart had been waiting for. And now I am running away from Max or running away from becoming a lone, successful person who is the loneliest person in the world? Perhaps six months from now I'll be able to answer that question."

There was no mail for her. When she entered the apartment, she was conscious that it had the dusty stale odor of a place unlived-in. And this had once been home, these few attractive rooms. How many times had Max kissed her here and she had held up her arms to him! Now she, Judith, was here to take down the draperies and pack the china. She thought, "It's the end of an era, I suppose. But to me it seems the end of my life."

That night she called Sid Biddison who accepted her decision with his usual mildness and good humor and lacking curiosity. Phyllis and Ames were not at home when she called. Other friends and acquaintances she called and some told her that she was foolish and some told her she was wise.

It was not until four evenings later that she found Ames at home.

"Phyllis is out," he said.

When she told him the news he said slowly, "Well, I don't blame you though we'll miss you, Judith. I can guess how happy this is making your family. Don't forget us. I'll tell Phyllis to call you tomorrow for sure.'

But Phyllis did not call the next day.

The moving men had left only a few minutes ago. Now the apartment was bare Her bag was packed and waiting near the door and she had put on her coat and hat. She wanted both to rush out and to linger -to rush out from the same recollections that made her want to linger Max had done this to her. He had uprooted her. Tears of helplessness rushed to her eyes.

Remembering the day she had met him she thought, 'But why do I persist in thinking that I shall see him again, that this isn't the end of Max and me?"

At the sound of heavy masculine footsteps coming down the hall, she began to tremble with an excitement almost too great to bear looked at the door which the moving men had left open.

It was Tim. He paused on the threshold and blinked at the empty apartment and at Judith. His eyes were red-rimmed, his long legs not quite steady. The sight of her standing in the empty apartment seemed to sober him instantly.

"Hey, what's this? What goes on here?"

"Hello, Tim. I'm moving. Rather I have moved. I'm—I'm going home. Come in. Sorry there isn't any place to sit."

He grinned. "There's always the floor." Coming in, he promptly sat on the floor and drew his long legs up almost to his chin.

"Tell me what this is all about. Going home? What's the idea? Is everybody in New York going home?"

"I'm going home because I've decided it's the best idea for me. I'm going to get a job in Clinton."

"Sounds crazy to me. You are doing great here. I really meant to call you up sooner but I . . . What have I been doing? I don't know. I can't remember. I'm crazy—not you. You've always had your feet firmly planted on good old terra firma." With an impatient gesture he pushed back his unkempt black hair. "I called the store this morning and they said you'd left. I wanted to take you to lunch."

"I'd like to go to lunch with you, but I really must get a train."

He held up his hand. "Just a minute. Don't go. Trains run every half hour. When—when is Emily coming back?"

"She isn't coming back, Tim."

He frowned. "Oh! So that's why she doesn't answer my letters? But why — why isn't she coming back?"

She said quietly. "Because of you."

"Because of me? That's why she should come back? I don't get it, Judith."

"She's in love with you." Aching from fatigue, she leaned against the rose-colored wall and took a deep breath. Tell him everything, she thought; tell him what Emily couldn't tell him. It's the honest, decent thing to do. "Tim, Emily went home to stay because she didn't want to be just one of the girls you play around with. You're Tim Stevens and your life has been mapped out for you. Those were her words. But you won't continue to play indefinitely. You'll get married and settle down and raise a family and be the kind of man your father is today. You have a path to follow. You have certain traditions to live up to. Emily respected that path and those traditions."

"You mean."

"I mean she wanted to be more to you than a pleasant memory of a lovely girl you knew once or a girl you might want to go on knowing and seeing after you married somebody else. You gave her fun and romance. But that wasn't enough. It never is enough. She wanted everything and she didn't feel she measured up. Grant that she did a brave thing. She loves you in the old-fashioned way, Tim. There are a good many old-fashioned girls beneath the smartest modern clothes. Now you know and now I really must be going."

"Wait a minute. You can't go! I'm having what is known as a revelation. You've got to give me time."

"You had it—Emily's time. She isn't bitter. It was just the way it was. There were circumstances over which neither of you had any control. She said you took all your advantages for granted."

"I didn't take her for granted."

"You don't know what it is to be poor, Tim. You don't know that Emily had to sell her insurance to pay her hospital expenses, the nice room and the special nurses and the best surgeon you ordered for her. You don't know that she, a naturally thrifty person, went into debt to buy clothes so that you wouldn't be ashamed of her in good places you took her. No, you don't know any of that. And you don't know either that that morning in the station she knew she was never going to see you again. And she loves you....Tim, these are so many words thrown at you because I'm in a hurry but you can realize the feelings behind them? Emily's feelings?"

"I'm beginning to because I happen to have a few of my own. Don't go. I can't let you go, Judith!" He looked at her like a small boy who begs to be understood. "I'm not very bright, I guess. I get by but I'm not very bright. Maybe I have taken it all for granted. Being Tim Stevens, just having that for a name, always opened doors to me. I've had a lot of fun and little or no responsibility. I've liked girls and girls have liked me. But I never examined my feelings before—before Emily. I don't think I had any until I knew her. I never thought about a girl unless she was with me—until Emily. You know, the little things—her profile when she's laughing, the way she used to scramble eggs. You're right. I didn't think about marrying her. If I've ever thought of marriage at all, it was to think of it as something far in the future for me and something I'd do one of these days.

"I suppose I took it for granted that Emily and I would go on the way we were....And then she went home." He said vehemently, "I've missed her like hell and I've been trying to kid myself by playing around and telling myself what was the difference between one good-looking gal and the next. But it was no good. There is a difference. Not even a few good sprees helped. I tried them and I came to.... wanting Emily to come back. She isn't any girl. She's my girl and I'm going out there and get her."

"You're still Tim Stevens." But she could not doubt his sincerity.

He grinned. "It's never been held against me before. Do you suppose I could convince her family it wouldn't be such a bad idea for her to marry me? I'd promise to stop playing around and quit the drinking. But, damn it, I won't promise anything if she won't come back with me! Feelings! Suppose you look at mine, Judith. I don't know where I've been and I don't care where I'm going—if Emily won't come back with me. She's the dearest — She's my girl and it'll be for keeps. Do you believe me?"

"Yes, I do, Tim."

"Thanks. And about my family....My mother knows. She hasn't told me but she knows. She knows her son. And my father....he'd be delighted because then I'd show up at the office every day. Now get this straight. They're not snobs. They're thoroughbreds. I know. And Emily will be received as the daughter they've always wanted. My parents are normal people who want their son to be happy and they'll love the girl who can make me happy. Are you with me, Judith?"

She smiled. "Of course. You know, it doesn't usually end this way."

He chuckled. "I know. Usually the little girl goes home and marries the village blacksmith." He got to his feet and grinned. "Well, that's that. I'm going places and I've got to get busy. Going to the office and break the news to Dad and then run out to the country and tell mother. Should I let Emily know of my honorable intentions in advance?"

"I'm not Emily, but if I were, I'd want you to surprise me even if I weren't wearing a pretty dress and didn't have on any lipstick. Emily is lovely without lipstick and in the plainest of dresses."

He laughed. "I'll take you to the station and talk to you until your train comes in. That is if you can stand hearing about Emily and me. I'm going to get married!"

Judith thought, "I'm heading home. I won't look back at this when I go out the door."

BEEKEEPERS TO PLAN SCHOOL

Training Course Now Being Arranged; O. S. U. Experts To Give Talks.

Richland countians who plan to start producing their own honey this summer as a substitute for sugar may be able to obtain free instruction soon at classes sponsored by the Richland County Beekeepers' association.

The organization is considering launching a training course in beekeeping if enough persons indicate they are interested in such a course, Philip Stier, Mansfield, president of the association, said yesterday.

The association will try out the idea at a meeting the night of March 20 at the courthouse when Christ Hergatt, county bee inspector, will be the speaker and demonstrator.

"If several persons come to that meeting and show they would like to have a school started in beekeeping, we may conduct classes every two weeks," Stier said.

He said bee experts from Ohio State university and other parts of the state would be brought here to conduct the classes.

Stier pointed out that bees are useful in pollinating fruit trees and farm crops as well as producers of one of the best sugar substitutes. More attention will be paid to bee raising this year because of their importance in the food production program, he said.

Wacky Musical

A wacky as their stage production by the same name, Olson and Johnson's comedy extravaganza, "Hellzapoppin," showing at the Ohio, is filled with one hilarious sequence after the other. The monkeyshines of the two comics are abetted by a trio of other screen comedians, Martha Raye, Mischa Auer and Hugh Herbert while a bevy of glamor girls supply some lively singing and dancing. "Hellzapoppin," made theatrical history on Broadway by carrying wildfire action from the stage throughout the house and the screen story substitutes that feature with some unusual surprises.

Predicts Science Will Eventually Banish Influenza

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Within the next two or three years scientists should be able to devise a good vaccine that will remove the scourge of influenza from the earth, according to a prominent New York research worker.

Dr. Wendell Stanley, of the Rockefeller Institute, based his optimism on isolation of a small bullet-shaped molecule — four millionths of an inch thick — the deadly flu virus long sought by the medical profession.

Magnified 25,000 diameters, a picture of the virus was obtained in Philadelphia through use of the electron miscroscope, an RCA product. The photograph was taken from the flu infection which killed a person here three years ago—and the same type which invaded the nation last winter.

The molecule, a small bit of protein, is one of the tiniest disease agents known to science. Report on its isolation was made by Drs. Leslie A. Chambers and Werner Henle, of the Eldridge Reeves Johnson Research foundation, University of Pennsylvania.

California Has Its Counterpart Of Paul Revere

SACRAMENTO, Cal. —(INS)— Phil Davis, a resident of the remote Turlare county town of Three Rivers is being hailed there as a modern Paul Revere as a result of his activities in organization.

When Phil heard about the Japanese attack on Hawaii, he set out to round up the neighbors. It was quite a chore, as that particular part of the country is noted for its wide open spaces rather than for its density of population.

Phil was able to round up some of his friends by automobile but to reach others he had to go on horseback and foot. He resorted to both methods. Then, too, he summoned a few by telephone. In all he succeeded in rousing some 46 residents of the community.

Inspired by Phil's vivid account of what was taking place the group met in the community hall, put Davis at the head of their organization, and are marking time until they can hear from National Defense headquarters telling them how they can help.

LAUNCH FARM LABOR SURVEY IN ASHLAND

Questionnaires Are Mailed To 3,000 Farmers In the County.

ASHLAND—The Ashland office of the United States employment service has mailed more than 3,000 questionnaires to Ashland county farmers. They ask two questions:

"Will you need farm workers during 1942?" and "Will you be available for work on other farms during 1942?"

According to A. D. Hiner, local employment office manager, these cards constitute the first step in the program of the federal employment service to estimate the probable demand for farm labor in Ohio preliminary to recruiting needed workers. As soon as the local agency determines how many farmers need additional help, a campaign will be started to recruit, classify and allocate workers where they are most needed.

Farmers are urged to fill these cards out and return them to the Ashland office.

HOLD RECORD

WESTMORELAND, N. H. —(U.P.)—The Cook family apparently has set some kind of record for railroad employment.

Since 1850 when Charles H. Cook became station agent here there has been at least one member of the family in the employ of the Boston & Maine railroad.

The family has a cumulative record of 370 years service. In all, 13 members of the family including two women, have worked for the railroad and there still are six members of the clan working as conductors or trainmen.

Be Quick To Treat Bronchitis

Chronic bronchitis may develop if your cough, chest cold, or acute bronchitis is not treated and you cannot afford to take a chance with any medicine less potent than Creomulsion which goes right to the seat of the trouble to help loosen and expel germ laden phlegm and aid nature to soothe and heal raw, tender, inflamed bronchial mucous membranes.

Creomulsion blends beechwood creosote by special process with other time tested medicines for coughs. It contains no narcotics.

No matter how many medicines you have tried, tell your druggist to sell you a bottle of Creomulsion with the understanding you must like the way it quickly allays the cough, permitting rest and sleep, or you are to have your money back. (Adv.)

You'd think with these district high school basketball tournaments being the grand climax and finale of the season for all but the chosen few teams that make the state tournament, that some special effort would be made to obtain the best officiating possible for these tourneys.

Well, that's just what you'd think. I haven't been able to observe any effort in that direction. Maybe some of the districts in the state make some effort to get outstanding officials, but there's no evidence that that's the case at Sandusky.

* * *

"Do you want to get killed?" Mansfield Mentor Vern Hoffman asked Referee Bannick after Friday night's game with Sandusky. "You keep on for four nights the way you worked tonight, and they're liable to be carrying you out on a stretcher."

"Why," retorted Bannick, "I thought I worked a pretty good game."

"You were working one game at one end of the floor, and an altogether different one at the other," Hoffman charged. "You were letting them get away with murder, and you were making us play sissy basketball. You were anticipating our fouls and blowing your whistle before a move had been made. And they were holding on to our shirts and our trunks and our arms, and jumping on our feet, and you must have seen some of it. But you never called it."

* * *

"Maybe you were just having a bad night tonight," soothed A. N. Smith, the other official, speaking to Hoffman. "Maybe you'll do better tomorrow night."

"If you guys don't do better tomorrow night you'll have me right out on the floor," Hoffman promised.

* * *

I didn't get to see Saturday night's game between Mansfield and Hoffman's old school, Bellevue. But I haven't heard that the officiating was any better. Neither have I heard that Hoffman went out on the floor.

But I hear that no less than 50 fouls were called in that game, and that the parade to the foul line didn't furnish the crowd with any great entertainment value.

Mansfield didn't suffer too much from the whistle tooting. The Tygers lost two players on personals and Bellevue lost three. The Tygers tallied 19 points from the charity line and Bellevue eight. Even so, the Tygers weren't hitting any too well on their foul shots, missing 13.

So long as the management of the Sandusky tournament employs officials from neighboring towns, just so long will schools on the outer edge of the district suspect the whistle blowers of being homers.

State Commissioner H. R. Townsend should have some idea of the rating of officials over the state, and he could remove that homer suspicion by appointing officials for each district joust, officials from a district not even bordering on the tournament section.

* * *

Joe Romano is worried. "I don't know whether I'll even win my letter," mused the Tyger guard. "Those Sandusky officials will only let me play half a game. They called one on me Saturday night when I was so far away from my man I couldn't have touched him if I had jumped." Anticipation?

Ohio Cage Tourney Nears End

Each Division Cut To 16 Teams This Week.

By FRITZ HOWELL

COLUMBUS —(AP)— Seventy-two of Ohio's 252 Class A high school basketball teams and 88 of the 902 Class B quintets were set today for this week's district tournaments, which will slash each contingent to the 16 state tourney qualifiers.

* * *

Only six of last year's 16 Class B survivors remain in the fight for the championship surrendered by Glenford in the opening round of the Perry county tourney, but 13 of the Class A leaders of 1942 are still in there pitching.

* * *

The famous Waterloo Wonders, winners of the Class B crown in 1934 and 1935, appear on their way to the state meet again, although Coach Magellan Hairston's Magicians face tough opposition in the district meet at Waverly.

Martins Ferry, winner of the Class A laurels last year, has Bridgeport, Steubenville Wells and East Liverpool to push aside at Steubenville to get a crack at the crown again.

Still in the Class B list of survivors are Hicksville, Smithfield, Berlin, Hanover, Zenia O. S. and S. O. Home and Waterloo of last year's state finalists, while only Bryan, Youngstown Rayen and Lima Central of the 1941 Class A qualifiers have dropped out.

Tonight at Tiltonsville, the last of the Class B sectional play is scheduled. Snow held up the tourney there, leaving the Yorkville-Bergholz and Belmont-Smithfield games tonight to determine the qualifiers for the Steubenville district play.

This week the Class A squads, preparing for next week's quartet of four-team regionals, will battle it out at a dozen spots, while the Class B teams have 13 district meets on tap. The Class B finals will be played at Springfield March 19, 20 and 21, while the four survivors of the Class A regionals will meet March 28 at Kent for the big championship.

Leaders Fall In Lima Joust

Mansfield Team Takes First In Class 'C.'

LIMA—(AP)—Former leaders in the women's state bowling tournament were a dime a dozen today.

In the most extensive shakeup since the event started, new pacesetters appeared in eight of 10 divisions in week-end rolling. The Class D Subscription team of Springfield and B. Smith of Toledo in Class B singles were the only leaders to survive.

Scoring 2686, the Desmshar Builders of Cleveland took over the Class A team lead and the former front-runners, Colsos of Columbus with 2534, sank to fifth place.

The new Class A doubles leaders were Elsie Flaig and Catherine Burling of Cincinnati with 1129, Evans pins ahead of second-place L. Newcomer and L. Shiplett of Zanesville.

Helen Archer of Cincinnati took over the Class A top with 623. Scoring 2400, the Pastime Recreation of Cambridge raced to the fore for Class B teams and in Class C it was Colony Recreation of Mansfield with 2147.

Two more week-ends of bowling remain in the tourney.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

CHARLOTTESVILLE, Va. — (Wide World) — Hottest subject for sports discussion in this sector seems to be whether freshmen should be allowed to play varsity football....Most of the coaches, except at military schools like V. M. I., where the army won't take any boys before they graduate, apparently favor using frosh but they're all waiting for someone else to make the first move.

CLEANING THE CUFF

Jack Crain is one of three Texas footballers who landed on the scholastic honor roll last season . . . And Toots Mirabito, Syracuse's two-time eastern intercollegiate heavyweight champion, is an honor student in physical education Yet you still hear coaches moaning because they may have to play students.

SERVICE DEPT.

Al Roth, former lightweight title contender, writes Bronx pals that he is stationed at Fort Randolph, Panama Canal Zone, and the censor won't let him say anything else except that it's very interesting down there....At Fort Shelby, Miss., Pvt. Henry Garbeck of Providence, R. I., and the 43rd division engineers basketball team, had four teeth filled one afternoon and four stitches taken in a cut on his chin he received during practice. That night he played a basketball game against doctor's orders. When someone asked how he felt, Hank replied: "Fine. I've been through three months of maneuvers, you know."

ZIVIC FACES END OF FISTIC TRAIL

PITTSBURGH—(INS)—With the end of the trail starring him in the face if he loses, Fritzie Zivic, ex-welterweight champion and veteran of a decade of ring wars, goes to the post again tonight against a flashy welterweight from New York, Izzy Jannazzo of Maryland. Odds are about even on the fight.

Mid-A Leaves Door Open

Hopes Youngstown and Warren Come In March 15.

SPRINGFIELD—(AP)—The Mid-Atlantic Baseball league is ready to open a 130-game season May 3 with six teams, but will leave the door open for Youngstown and Warren to come in by March 15.

* * *

Youngstown joined Akron in leaving the loop after the St. Louis Browns of the American league withdrew their support of the Steel city team because of player shortages.

Mid-Atlantic President Elmer Daily told a week-end meeting of league moguls here that he would continue to seek major league franchises for both Youngstown and Warren. Officials agreed to wait until mid-March before counting them out. Warren has been considered a possible successor to Akron.

The season will close Sept. 7 and each team voted to donate proceeds from one game to the United Service organization. Another meeting will be held in Zanesville, on a date to be set later, to handle possible schedule changes.

League members are: Springfield, Dayton, Canton, Zanesville, Charleston, W. Va., and Erie, Pa.

NEED STICK WORK

SAN DIEGO, Cal.—(INS)—Large doses of batting practice were prescribed for Connie Mack's ailing Athletics today following their third consecutive loss to minor league opposition. Weak hitting was blamed for the A's 5-4 loss to the San Diego Pandres.

Indians Start On Right Foot

Win First Game For Boudreau Over Reds.

NEW YORK—(AP)—The Cleveland Indians, starting life anew with Lou Boudreau filling the shoes vacated by Roger Peckinpaugh and half a dozen pitchers trying to fill those left by Bobby Feller, are off on the right food in baseball's grapefruit circuit, preview of the 1942 campaign.

The Indians opened their spring training series yesterday by downing the Cincinnati Reds, 5-3, at Tampa, Fla., although they were outhit 9-6 by the National league club which also was making its exhibition debut.

That victory, coupled with the New York Yankees' first spring loss, put the Tribe at the top of the grapefruit standings, the only team in action that hasn't suffered defeat.

Half of the teams in each major league haven't worked enough kinks out of their muscles yet to take on serious opposition.

Eighteen games have been played in the past nine days, with the Brooklyn Dodgers and the Philadelphia Athletics the only teams that have gone outside the major leagues.

At Havana, the Dodgers opened the grapefruit season by taking a two-game series with the New York Giants. Then the National league champions got mixed up with a team of Cuban all-stars and wound up on the short end of a five-game series.

The all-stars won the rubber game yesterday with a 3-0 shutout in the nightcap of a doubleheader after the Dodgers had squared the series by winning the opener, 6-3.

The Athletics, training in California, have faced Pacific Coast league teams in a half dozen games and boast nothing better than a .500 percentage.

The Indianapolis Capitals came within one point of the leading Cleveland Barons of the American ice hockey league western division today after shading the Springfield Indians, eastern division leaders, 3-2, while the Barons dropped a 4-7 decision to the New Haven Eagles.

The Eagles, nine points off the pace in the eastern section, gained ground on the Springfield sextet who seem virtually assured of first place. In other games, the Buffalo Bisons downed the Providence Reds, 8-4, while the Philadelphia Rockets dropped another encounter to the Washington Lions, 7-1.

Toledo Given Garden Bid

Gerber Leaves Hospital and Returns With Team.

TOLEDO —(U.P.)— Elated by receipt of an inviation to compete in the national college invitational tournament in Madison Square Garden, the Toledo Rockets today affirmed the old saying that every cloud has a silver lining.

The Rockets thought their chances of getting into the Garden tourney went glimmering when big Bob Gerber, their chief scorer, went to the hospital with an infected leg last Wednesday. The Rockets lost to Long Island U. that night in their initial Garden appearance this season.

But the tourney sponsors presumably made due allowance for the absence of Gerber and figured that Toledo would have been a virtual winner with Gerber's scoring punch. Long Island won by only five points. The Gerber-less Toledo five came back to thump La Salle, 65 to 37, at Philadelphia Saturday night.

Gerber, who has set new all-time three-year and season Ohio college scoring marks, left the hospital in New York yesterday and accompanied his mates home.

The Garden tourney opens one week from tomorrow night. Toledo has won 22 out of 25 games this season.

Dodds And Rice Gallop Tonight

NEW YORK—(INS)—Greg Rice, incomparable distance runner, and Gil Dodds, this winter's surprise in the mile, are slated to run at Washington tonight in the Catholic university meet, then will make their next New York appearance Saturday night in the annual K. of C. games.

Assuming both win tonight, Rice will come here seeking to keep going a winning streak started in 1940, while Dodds will try to make it two in a row over Les MacMitchell.

* * *

Dodds beat the New York university runner a week ago, and the latter came back Saturday night to win the I. C. 4-A mile — but against something less than the competition he got and probably will get again from Dodds.

* * *

MacMitchell took the I. C. 4-A crown in 4:13.7, which he undoubtedly will have to better against Dodds in the famed Columbian mile of the K. C. games.

Penn State took the I. C. 4-A team title by a margin of 27 7-10 points against 20½ for the defending Fordham team among 34 collegiate entries.

Advice Proved Right For Coach

(By Wide World)

PALESTINE, Tex. — John Coombs, the one-time major league pitcher and now Duke university's coach, attributes his baseball success to an illiterate Italian immigrant.

Coombs, spending the winter here, recalled that he had started well for the Philadelphia A's in 1906 with three victories but lost his control in his forth game.

* * *

"The papers said I ought to be sent back to the minors for more training. I went to Eddie Plank, a star pitcher, and asked him what was wrong with my delivery but Eddie said he didn't know.

"The next day I saw our ice delivery man, an Italia who could hardly speak English. He told me I was rotten when he saw me pitch and that I ought to move my right foot a little toward third base while pitching. I felt insulted—the idea of an uninformed foreigner telling me how to throw.

"But I decided to try it. And his suggestion was just the thing I needed. I could zip the ball over the heart of the plate. So that taught me never to discard advice without giving it consideration," Coombs concludes.

STOCKS STAND SHOCK OF MORE ADVERSE NEWS

Only Few Leaders Record Progress as Trading Action Lags.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—Stocks stood a further run of adverse war reports with a fair equanimity today but only a scattering of leaders recorded progress.

Trends were slightly mixed at the start with the majority of changes confined to minor fractions. Turnover was small.

Bonds were mixed and commodities leaned downward.

The news generally was far from optimistic and the market reflected a decidedly timid buying interest, but it appeared some bidding was based on the idea last week's decline had put the list in the way of a technical rally.

Holders of steel shares found one or two discordant notes in the weekly review of the magazine "Steel" which said that some mill facilities remain idle because of the continued shortage of scrap.

"Tonnage from the automobile wrecking yards has begun to move," said the publication, "but the total is disappointing compared with expectations. Search for scrap by various public agencies has been intensified and is producing results. Organized collection of farm scrap is broadening.

"Since automobile production has been stopped a large source of scrap has disappeared and products now being made by automobile manufacturers do not yield sufficient to make up the loss."

Museums Will Move Treasures During Air Raids

PHILADELPHIA —(INS)— Philadelphia's museums have completed detailed plans for the protection of their priceless exhibits in event of an air raid.

The Philadelphia Museum of Art has compiled a list of "A-1" things which are to be moved to bomb-proof storage at the first warning by officials. The Pennsylvania Historical society has decided to place its 10 most valuable items in bank vaults and to move other precious objects to fireproof storage.

Franklin Institute is considering a special shelter for its Fels Planetarium, and has already placed a number of irreplaceable objects in a vault in the basement.

Fifteen or twenty of the most valuable paintings at the Pennsylvania academy will be moved to a place of safety, and the Carpenters' company, owner of Carpenters' hall, where the first Continental congress met, has had its records in bank vaults for some time, officials said.

PRISONERS TURN OUT WAR GOODS

CANON CITY, Colo — (U.P.) — Warden Roy Best has offered the facilities of the Colorado State Penitentiary to the nation for production of war materials.

He said most of the prison's more than 1,300 convicts could be put to work manufacturing war supplies and that 27 women prisoners have volunteered to make bandages.

"We have a good sheet metal setup that could be converted readily to war industries," he said.

"We are equipped to turn out 6,000 dozen pairs of hose and 5,000 dozen suits of underwear annually as well as other knit goods and large quantities of soap."
